Regarding saving over profile data:

Requirements will need to be set for which (if any) fields are 'read only' and how we need to handle the "RESUME info" vs the "PROFILE info"

If we change on profile, user will need modal feedback. If we have information on resume that does not match the profile, we will need modal feedback to call that out--possible link to profile.

To be discussed.

Regarding Modal:

We need to be sure no loops are created. And we will need a copywriter for consistency and voice in all feedback.

Secondary CTA: The reset would send user back to page with original profile settings.

Primary CTA: Saves over profile info and returns user to form. If user pressed SAVE, then user should return to form--but should only receive the modal again if they make another edit to the profile. If user pressed SAVE AND CONTINUE then user should land on next accordion.

Regarding the rich text requirement and OBJECTIVES:

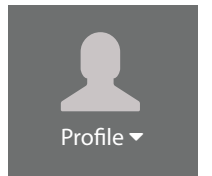

Im not sure what the value of adding this to a summary/objective. Objectives are generally recommended to be in sentence form so the need for rich text may not be there...?

We will style the objective on the final resume output.

If we do decide to use rich text here, we should build a maleable 'rich text' directive and be able to limit the features and control the UI so it blends with the CSS themes

Requirements in story

How any formatting is handled in resume output is TBD
